— A Paradox.

We live for three years in a never-never land somewhere between nonentity and individualism between fantasy and reality.

We exist here warmed by friendship, or simply to be alone in the crowd, to be to exist.

We make our way through the maze
in a cycle of emotions—elation depression
apathy
contentment despair.

We search and search
For the something that must be there—
To bring out of chaos, harmony out of dark, sunlight out of regimentation, freedom of movement and thought

In our search for truth We omit nothing literature sports people. It would seem futile except that At times we succeed in a look an idea or a snatch of conversation. For an instant We see that Truth in itself is a paradox And, as such, is here at Central to be discovered.

WE DEDICATE:

She demands much of every student who enters her room. And she gets it. To disappoint her would be the ultimate failure. To her National Honor Society members, she represents cool, rational thinking and an uncanny sense of perspective—valued qualities in an adviser. To the students who come to her for guidance, she is perceptive. She is Miss Betty Marie Welch, and to her we dedicate the 1968 Pemican.

Miss Betty M. Welch

During 1967-68 High Point's city school board and administration made extensive plans for the future of High Point schools. Chief project for the year was the completion of T. Wingate Andrews High School in the northeastern part of the city and the assignment of students. The board also considered proposals for the construction of new elementry and junior high schools.

This year the work of the board was led by John W. Clinard, Jr., chairman, and A. Laurin Welborn, vice-chairman. Other members included Clyde R. Carden, Roy B. Culler, Jr., Dr. Perry P. Little, J. C. McAllister, Jr., and Mrs. Evelyn Thompson.

Dean, Counselors comprise nucleus of aid

Central's Attendance Office team, Mr. Vance and Mrs. Hocutt, pander over a student's record.

"Understanding and helpful" would be suitable words to describe Mr. Ralph H. Vance, dean of Central High. Although his main duty was to issue a bulletin of absencies, tardies, and check outs each day, many students sought him for some additional help or service. His assistant in the dean's office was Mrs. Lee Hocutt

Mrs. Janet McCurry and Mrs. Evelyn Harris, full-time counselors at CHS, reviewed the records and credits of students and called personal interviews. Students frequently sought the aid of counselors for advice ranging from personal problems to college decisions. As guidance directors, Mrs. McCurry and Mrs. Harris worked with the administration, faculty, students, and parents to provide information and counseling services for all students.

Mrs. Teague takes time out from her duties as Business Secretary for a quick snapshot.

One of the most important persons at school is Mrs. Jackson. With a smile and a cheerful word, she is always ready to help everyone.

Secretaries assist students and school

With one less full-time counselor this year, the guidance department welcomed Mr. Kenneth Dickens, Miss Betty Welch, and Mr. Herb Hipps as part-time counselors. To insure each student of the maximum assistance, each guidance person received a different portion of the student alphabet for his counseling. Students received aid concerning personal problems, college selection, and career choice.

Two valuable individuals in the General Office were Mrs. Johnsie Jackson and Mrs. Doris Teague. As secretary Mrs. Teague was responsible for statistical reports and for supplying information to students and teachers. The friendly efficiency of these secretaries contributed much to the smooth operation of the school.

Perfarming one af her many duties as guidance caunselor, Mrs. McCurry briefs students an upcoming tests.

Mrs. Harris' cheery smile and warm personality have made her a popular guidance caunselor with Central students.

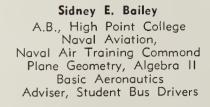

Miss Welch, Mr. Hipps, and Mr. Dickens, teacher-caunselors, chat aver a rare cup of coffee.

CURRICULUM . . . Varied English courses,

Miss Brookbank gives her senior English closs on ossignment to prepare for discussion.

English students at CHS explored the many-sided aspects of the English language through a study of English and American literature and the fundamental elements of grammar and composition. Advanced seniors had an opportunity to learn creative writing by studying advanced composition, a relatively new course at Central High.

Well-planned speeches, dramatic skits, and spirited discussions enlivened many English classes. Other activities which were designed to develop effective communication of ideas included writing business and social letters, interpreting written problems, composing, paragraphs, building vocabulary through word study, and preparing research papers.

Writing for school publications—magazine, newspaper, and yearbook — also provided students an opporunity to develop journalistic skills.

Reolizing the importance of studying, junior English students concentrate on reading material.

speech classes build better communication

Students of the spoken word discover that "speech determines foilure or success."

Speech students pursued activities designed to produce excellence in both oratory and dramatic reading. They undertook projects and diligently worked to achieve good stage composure and forceful speaking ability. They presented assembly programs, prepared readings for radio broadcasts, and participated in the World Peace Speaking Contest. Several delegates attended the North Carolina Speech Festival and the Southern Speech Convention Festival.

In dramatics classes, students discovered the magic of acting. After a study of the history of drama, they learned the fundamentals of play production. Costumes, make-ups, stage setting, and lighting contributed to real performing and evaluation. Students also presented one-act plays and made observations of acting in motion pictures and television.

Through her pontomime of a headoche, Debbie Wooster successfully conveys her reaction to poin.

Foreign tongues spark students' interest

Gail Martin proves to be an attractive model of a lace cap still worn in many French provinces today.

"Ferocious" Robert Hulbert assumes the classic stance of a Roman soldier as he arms himself with shield and sword.

Rare is the moment that even a Spanish student has time to take a siesta during a busy day at Central.

Bonjour! Buenos dias! Every day expressions such as these echoed through the halls of Central's language wing as students learned the art of communicating with natives of other lands. The old French grammar method known as "la plume de ma tante" went out with the bustles, and in its place came modern methods of stressing conversation and culture by use of slides, movies, music, art, and tapes prepared by lab assistants.

During language week, special decorations filled the halls, and language classes challenged each other in contests. Students dressed in authentic costumes sold cookies to raise money to send a sophomore or junior to study in Mexico.

Learning became fun as students realized that the study of languages, both ancient and modern, increased world understanding.

Business courses train students for future

Combining both theoretical and practical knowledge, the business education department of Central High sought to provide its students with adequate business training. Shorthand, typing, business mathematics, bookkeeping, accounting, and business English offered a thorough course in business education to the ambitious student. During office practice periods, students learned to operate efficiently the various machines used in office work. They also gained valuable experience by assisting teachers with such clerical work as typing and running off stencils, preparing study materials, and grading test papers.

A selected group of students did part-time work in the various school offices. They also acquired added efficiency and at the same time performed a great service for the school.

"The quick brown fax jumped over the fence. The quick brown fox . . . " And the steady click af the typewriter goes on.

Sharthand is a very useful subject far jab training, and a student must practice canstantly to acquire and maintain efficiency.

Social studies link present with past

Students begin to visualize the exponse of the Napoleonic Empire as Mrs. Whitesell points out its location on the map.

Courses offered by the social studies department included American history, world history, psychology, economics and sociology, geography, and government. Students learned about the growth of the nation in both regular and TV classes of American history. World history unfolded to them the pageant of man's progress from the earliest time to the present. Economics and sociology classes made a study of the problems of production, distribution, and consumption of goods. Geography students surveyed the physical aspects of countries, while students of government learned the operations of local, state, and federal systems. Films, books, projects, oral reports, panel discussions, field trips, news articles, and maps all assisted the students to understand and interpret the record of events both past and present.

Mr. Dickens prepores his students for o lesson in World History by the TV studio teocher.

A special project is a frequent assignment at Central, and a trip to the library is a necessity for the conscientious student.

Library opens door to world of knowledge

Whether searching for a book for an oral report or taking notes for a term paper, students used the resources of Central High's well-stocked library. During the year the library acquired many new books and other learning materials to satisfy the wide range of reading interests found in the school.

With the aid of industrious student workers, Miss Bain Johnson, Miss Mary E. Byrd, and Mrs. Betty White worked toward improving the organization of reference materials. Throughout the year the library was decorated with various paintings, bulletin board arrangements, and objects from different countries. These displays helped to create an informative atmosphere that caught the student's attention and stimulated him to do further reading and research.

Irving Chernoff typifies the student in deep research as he pursues his topic in biography.

Experiments foster interest in science

Mr. Andrews drows a sketch to illustrate the motter the girls may find when they look into the microscopes during an experiment.

Seemingly reflecting the knowledge goined in the chemistry lob, Rick Corden, evaluates the outcome of an experiment.

Physics experiments moy demonstrate bosic principles or complex theories.

Certain aromas issuing out of the science laboratories made people aware that the science department was full of action during the 1967-68 school year. Sophomores, exploring the many facets of biology, spent their time dissecting animals, studying structures, and discovering a new world of life under the microscope. Juniors and seniors involved themselves with the more complicated sciences. Chemistry, physics, and advanced biology experiments gave them better insight as to why things happened as they did. Physical science students obtained a general science background as they studied the world around them.

Many students proved themselves as true scientists by displaying outstanding entries in the Science Fair. By the end of the year all science students had become aware of the important role that science plays in the world today.

New techniques modernize Math Department

Well-known for its mathematics department, Central High continued the trend in "new math" courses during 1967-68. Modern Algebra I and II replaced the old algebra courses, and fused goemetry followed immediately after Algebra I. Advanced students chose advanced algebra or a course in algebra-trigonometry. They also had a choice of analytics or a semester of trigonometry after completing the basic algebra and geometry courses. Other courses included general mathematics and basic aeronautics.

Whether the goal was preparation for business or college, the CHS student found opportunity to pursue the mathematics course best suited to his needs now and after high school. Through his studies he realized that a knowledge of mathematics is essential for achievement in today's technical world.

In higher mathematics, "security" is an elementary abaccus.

The overhead projection and tips from a student's point of view make basic aeronautics a little easier.

As the end of the six weeks approaches, students barrage Miss Welch's work basket with "tons" of advanced algebra homework.

Girls learn basic principles of homemaking

To achieve the effect of a real chef, Peggy Key dons the typical headdress as she prepares a dish in home economics.

Using such techniques as demonstrations, films, discussions, self-instructional programming, role playing, and laboratory experience, students of home economics profited in learning various units of study. Some of the units were clothing construction, needlework, food preparation and management, child development, family relationship, and health and home safety. Some immediate products of these studies were adequate cooking accomplishments and tasteful, newly made garments.

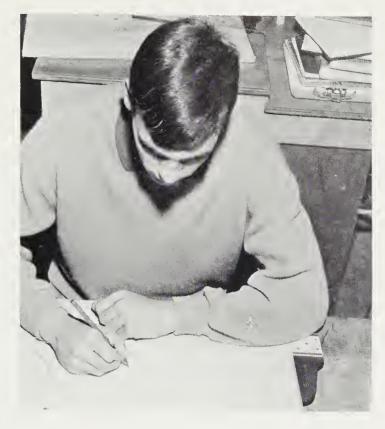

Mrs. Mae Murphy, chairman of the home economics department, was selected to appear in the 1967 edition of "Outstanding Young Women of America." These women were honored because of their contributions and accomplishments in civic endeavors, religious, professional and political activities.

Concentration and determination go into the making of a new dress. This new seamstress gives her undivided attention to fitting her cloth to her pattern.

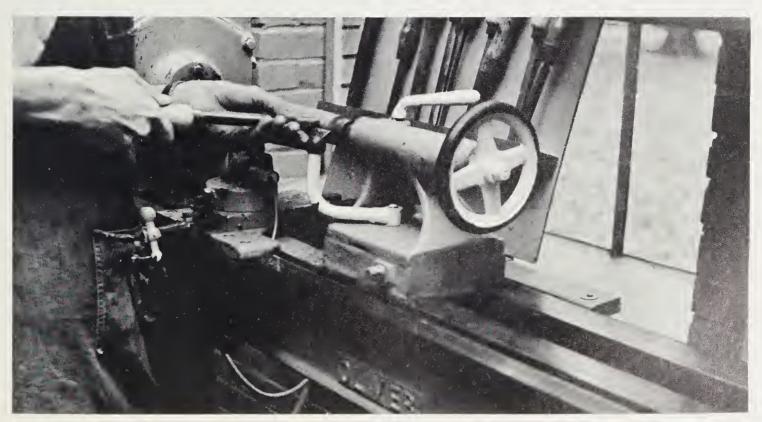

Students achieve skill in industrial arts

The sound of electric saws, the glare of oxyacetylene torches, and the scratch of designing pencils were some of the items one might observe as he walked through the industrial arts department. In metal work, students were learning to make useful articles out of metal. At first woodwork students made small projects and then went on to design and construct larger pieces of furniture. Making detailed drawing, including blue prints and house plans, fast became routine for mechanical drawing students as they gained proficiency in their work. The many useful articles which the students made brought a feeling of personal accomplishment — of manual dexterity, clear thought, and careful planning.

A pencil, a T-Square, and imagination combine to transform abstract ideas into concrete plans.

Skillful hands have a distinctive look: powerful and efficient. In shop class, hands like these are important to the finished product.

Driver Education teaches rules of safety

In oddition to porticipating in regular sports, such as baseball and basketball, the boys also spend time lifting weights to get in shope.

It is a difficult feot to build o pyromid, but the boys in this gym closs seem to think it is more fun when it falls.

A port of clossroom driver training is learning the different ports of the cor and their importance in its operation.

Phys. Ed. stresses sports for boys, girls

During the winter months, the girls in gym class hold keen competition in indoor sparts. Here, the girls warm up before ploying.

"Driver education is good stuff!" declared Mr. Myers, popular driving instructor. Many students agreed after they had completed their classroom instruction and under-thewheel supervision for eighteen days. Longawaited licenses were received, and students began driving the family car to school.

Once at school, students were kept in good physical condition by the excellent programs offered by the physical education department. Boys began their physical education period with calisthenics. These invigorating exercises strengthened muscles and prepared the boys for such sports as wrestling, football, basketball, tennis, and track.

Girls began class by sit-ups, touching the floor, and other vigorous exercises. As the seasons advanced, the girls played softball, basketball, shuffleboard, tennis, and ran track.

Alone on a speedball field, Alice Gorrord smiles as she thinks of the brilliant plays she may make in the next game.

Marching Band members lend their support to the football team.

High Point Central's marching band concluded another successful season in November. They performed during all the football games except one, playing both program and half-time shows. Head majorette Janice Bateman and drum majors Gary Beauchamp and James Whitley helped Mr. Carter organize the one hundred members of the band into a precision group. Members of the concert and symphonic bands were combined in the marching band.

Last summer the band continued its yearly tradition of bringing home two trophies from the annual music competition at Myrtle Beach, S. C. The band, playing in concert, placed third in concert performance, and also placed third in the Sun Fun Parade. There were twenty-five bands in the parade competition.

The concert, stage, and symphonic bands of CHS performed well at their December concert. At the Christmas assembly the symphonic and concert bands teamed up to present a beautiful musical program. In the spring both bands played in the state contest.

The stage band was composed of students from both concert and symphonic groups. In addition to their concerts, the stage band played at dances and civic clubs in the community.

One of the high points of the year was the All-State Band tryouts. This year thirty-seven students tried out and thirteen won places. These members participated in the All-State Band in Greensboro in the spring.

Chorolettes worked diligently this year to improve posture, to sight-read music, to watch their director closely, and to produce on overall better quality of sound. At Christmas the Choralettes joined with A Coppella and other musical groups to present on inspiring program to the entire student body. Choralettes presented three concerts during the year and participated in the District Chorol Contest, along with members of the A Cappello Choir.

Ensemble, a branch of A Cappella Choir, was a combination of boys' and girls' octets. Appearing at assemblies, church meetings, and civic club banquets, the Ensemble singers charmed audiences with their harmonious lyrics.

In its second year at CHS, the Mixed Chorus worked faithfully to acquire the choral techniques of proper breathing, tone quality, and diction, keeping in mind the ambition to gain a place in A Cappela Choir. Several members participated in the District Choral Contest at UNC-G and in the Choral Workshop at Chapel Hill.

In co-operation with other musical groups, the Girls' Chorus learned a repertoire of songs which they presented in several programs including the Christmas, winter, and spring concerts. Along with their musical duties, the girls helped to sell tickets to the various concerts.

The long choir robe is a sure sign of an A Cappella man.

In November the Orchestra gave its annual concert, and on occasions during the year the group presented concerts in junior and senior high schools. At Christmas the Orchestra took part in a special program for CHS students.

The popular String Quartet, a newly-organized music group, played at many school functions during the year. Composed of viola, cello, and two violins, the String Quartet, presented several special numbers during orchestra concerts.

Composed of principal string players from the Symphonic Orchestra, the Chamber Orchestra presented several concerts during the year at elementary and junior high schools. The musicals also joined with other groups to present the annual Christmas program to the entire student body. They also participated in the North Carolina Orchestra Festival at UNC-G.

The Chamber Orchestra was chosen on the basis of such qualifications as musical ability, attitude, and available practice time. With a varied repertoire, the group developed musical knowledge and promoted musical achievement. In December the Orchestra evidenced its talents by placing several members in the contest for All-State honors. Sixteen outstanding members were selected for participation in the All-State Honors Orchestra.

CLASSES

CLASSES . . .

For the Class of 1968, graduation brings

SENIOR CLASS OFFICERS: Ann Whitley, treasurer; Jane Bernat, secretary; Larry Wagner, vice-president; Jim Caplanides, president.

All year the seniors had realized this was their last time to do many things as high school students at Central. They attended their last athletic games, took part in their last Career Day and College Day, and chose their last Homecoming Court. At the same time they participated in activities set aside for seniors only—such as choosing their class mascots, electing senior superlatives, attending the Senior Banquet and Awards Day, and participating in the Junior-Senior prom.

The senior year also meant planning for the future. Some took College Boards, searched to find the right college or technical school for them, and then waited hopefully for their applications to be accepted. Others surveyed job possibilities.

As graduation approached, the seniors realized with mixed emotions that they stood on the threshold of tomorrow. As they departed, they carried with them memories of happy friendships that will never be forgetten.

SENIOR CLASS ADVISORS: Mrs. Raberts, Mr. Pierce, Miss Braakbank, Miss Joseph.

With feelings of nervousness and trepidation, the sophomores entered their first year of high school. At first everything seemed confusing and bewildering! Then, slowly, gradually, things began to clear up, and life at Central High began to take on both form and meaning for the Class of 1970.

The first order of business was to organize the class itself. At a meeting early in October, officers were elected and projects for the year were begun. In November the group conducted a magazine sale to finance the Sophomore section of the Pemican and other class projects. Members of the Class of 1970 also took part in many school activities, including sports, service groups, academic clubs, and musical organizations.

To re-create the memorable events of 1967-68, the Pemican staff members chose the theme "A Paradox of Man and Stone." Through picture and story they sought to convey the idea that every part of Central High enters into the personality of its students.

"What goes into the production of a good yearbook?" one might ask. The members of the staff would tell you that drawing layouts, planning pictures, writing copy, composing headlines, identifying photographs, compiling statistics, and selling advertising were among the major tasks of the first semester. Then, as the deadline approached, typewriters clicked overtime as last-minute copy was corrected and revised. As each staff member completed his work, he felt that he had helped to capture the mood of school life at Central High.

Eight times during the year students received the Pointer, High Point Central's school newspaper. Much time, work, and effort went into the Pointer to present it to the students as an interesting journal of school news. Encompassing all aspects of life at CHS, it was written for the students with the students' interests in mind

The Pointer gave interested students on opportunity to develop their talents in journalism. Writers and photographers struggled to get pictures made and developed and articles written correctly before the paper was sent to press. Business staff members sold advertising to help finance the Pointer. Often there was a rush to get the paper to the students on time.

NHS members devote time, energy to CHS,

Members of the National Honor Society endeavored to be living examples of scholarship, leadership, character, and service. Advised by Miss Betty Welch, the members gave a tea for teachers at the beginning of the school year. They also were co-sponsors of College Day and served as proctors for the lowa tests. Three specific projects undertaken by NHS were participating in Homecoming with a float, providing a trophy case for scholastic honors, and preparing a scrapbook for entry in the state contest. The winter induction of new members was in December, with another induction in the spring. At those inductions, more students with the potenial for leadership received the honor of NHS membership.

The purpose of this achievement-service organization was to promote and honor scholarship. The members tried to fulfill the standards and high ideals in character, achievement, and leadership. Advisers were Miss Geneva Highfill and Miss Wanda Walton.

Projects during the year were such services as making part of the signs for College Day and working with the National Honor Society in presenting the College Day program for the benefit of students planning to attend college. Beta Club members also served as proctors for the lowa tests given to sophomores. In the spring, junior members gave a tea honoring senior members of the group.

Recognizing students with outstanding ability in speech and encouraging participation in dramatics were two aims of Masque and Gavel during 1967-68. At their two meetings each manth, members planned projects and special activities to bring about oral excellence.

Highlights of the year were the special activities undertaken by Masque and Gavel. Directed by Miss Ruth Goadman, adviser, the graup presented several ane-act plays before an appreciative audience, thereby gaining valuable experience in both acting and production. In the spring a speech delegation attended the State Speech Convention, and several delegates taak part in the State Speech Festival at Wake Forest University. There they participated in programs with Masque and Gavel graups from all parts of North Carolina.

SC promotes democracy throughout school,

Enthusiastic students demonstrate their spirit as they participate in a "sit-in" in honor of the Bison.

Moving closer to its goal of promoting leadership, fellowship, and school spirit, the Student Council sponsored many projects throughout the year. Among these projects were the Homecoming "In" Week, the Talent Show, Image Week, and helping with the Gentry Fund Serving as guides at PTSA and sponsoring the Inter-Club Council were other services rendered by the Student Council. Members of the SC sang songs over the public address system to stimulate school spirit and to encourage participation in school-sponsored activities.

Delegates of the Student Council attended both the Southern Association and the North Carolina Student Council conventions. As the yearly reports of the Council members were given, it was clear that Central High had achieved improvement not only for the school itself but also for the individual student. A deep feeling of democracy and unity was sensed by all.

Reflecting the talents of various groups, the school magazine, Opus, continued as a creative out-let for students. The issue of 1968, containing original material contributed by students, carried poetry, short stories, essays, and art work. Themes were varied; no one overall impression was given. The basic purpose of the magazine was to encompass many aspects of life at CHS and to foster the talents of its students.

Selections for the past year were based on the evaluation of the editorial staff. Material submitted was typed with the names omitted and distributed to the evaluating committee. Selections were chosen on the basis of literary quality. With the advent of the second issue, Opus had become a tradition at CHS.

NFL maintains standards of excellence

Central NFL member, Bill Parker, greets a busload of students who eagerly anticipate the speech contest.

One of Central High's closest links with the outside world this year was the National Forensic League, upholding a longtime standard of excellence in competitive speech work. Activities for 1967-68 covered debate, original oratory, oratorical interpretation, dramatic interpretation, extemporaneous speaking, and humorous interpretation. For tournaments this year, qualified students spent Christmas in Miami; attended the Cherry Blossom Debate Tournament at Georgetown University (Washington, D. C.); and in March participated in the Barkley Forum at Emory University in Atlanta. In April the District NFL (comprising the states of West Virginia, Virginia, South Carolina, North Carolina, and Georgia) met in High Point.

Advisers for NFL activities were Mrs. Bruce Roberts and Mr. Michael Pierce.

After a contest, tension and anticipation are high as speakers scan the lists for their grade.

NFL advisors, Mrs. Roberts and Mr. Pierce, make last minute checks before the club hosts a regional speech tournament.

To teach students to speak intelligently, to organize their thoughts, and to influence others—this was the purpose of Central High's 1968 debate team. This year's members worked diligently to achieve excellence in oratory. Tournaments and festivals helped each debater to rate himself with others and to know how to improve his delivery.

Not only did Central's debaters attend tournaments, but they sponsored them as well. The Furniture City Open and the North Carolina State Debate Tournament were two such meetings which the debate team sponsored.

During the year the debaters represented Central well in such tournaments and festivals as the Barkley Forum, Emory University; a tournament in Miami, Florida; the Cherry Blossom Festival in Georgetown; and the NFL District Tournament. Coaches for the debate team were Mrs. Bruce Roberts and Mr. Michael Pierce.

Hi-Y serves community through projects;

To maintain and extend throughout school and community high standards of Christian conduct was the purpose of Hí-Y during 1967-68. The boys met each Monday evening at the YMCA to plan their projects and carry out their programs. Several well-known speakers made inspiring talks on the subject of service to the school and the community.

At school the Hi-Y joined with other service groups to help keep the grounds neat and clean. As a community service, The Hi-Y assisted the YMCA Men's Club in the annual Christmas tree sale, and for their own moneymaking project, the boys sold candy bars. In December several delegates attended the statewide Hi-Y convention. Advisers were Mr. Bays and Mr. Farlow.

Y-Teens grow in friendship, knowledge,

Y-Teens, sponsored by the YWCA, participated in the many activities that occupied Central's service clubs. Mrs. Mary Mason and Miss Nancy McInnis assisted the girls in their various programs of the year.

As a money-making project the Y-Teens conducted a bake sale and a holly sale. Profits from these sales were used to defray the expenses of delegates to the Y-Teen Conference. They constructed toys for the nursery and served as hostesses for the Tri-City Conference held in High Point.

As they participated in programs and activities, Y-Teens kept in mind the purpose of their organization: To grow in friendship, in knowledge, and in love of God and all mankind.

Inter-Act members perform parking lot duty for Central's annual Career Day.

As their main club project, members of Inter-Act assisted with the Career Day program and acted as guides for students, teachers, and visiting speakers. Sponsored by the High Point Rotary Club, Inter-Act members had as their advisers, Mr. Surratt and Mr. Johnson.

At their weekly meetings the boys discussed ways to increase their knowledge and understanding of community, state, national, and world-wide affairs. To establish world-wide bonds, the club inaugurated the project of sending bicycles to Bolivia. As a community activity, the boys sold tickets for the annual auction and barbecue held by the High Point Rotary Club. At school Inter-Act members joined with other service groups to assist in keeping the school grounds clean.

Jr. Civitans collect Red Cross ditty bags,

By planning effective programs Jr. Civitans hope to carry out worthwhile projects.

With their objective of promoting good citizenship, the Junior Civitan Club enthusiastically worked for various community fund drives. As a help to the school, the boys assisted other service clubs in keeping the school grounds clean. They also helped with athletics by carrying chains at football games. One of the main projects of the club was the collection of ditty bags for the Red Cross.

Meeting every other week, usually in the homes of members, the boys presented programs concerning better living standards, sportsmanlike conduct, and better citizenship ideals at CHS and in High Point. Advisers for the Junior Civitans were Mr. Clements and Mr. Reeves.

A special project was the cleaning and dusting of show rooms in the Furniture Building for the High Point Furniture Market. Advisers for the Civinettes were Miss Parks and Mrs. Phillips.

Developing young men toward manhood through service and enrichment in the fields of education and religion, while serving school and community was the purpose of the Key Club. The members, composed of sophomores, junior, and senior boys, worked to fulfill this purpose. They gained experience in working together while performing such duties as painting trash cans and selling programs at all home football and basketball games. Their major project for the year was the publication of the Student Directory, along with the school handbook, which was an aid to all students and teachers. During football season they assisted at the concession stands. To boost school spirit at the Homecoming game, each member proudly displayed a "Go Bison" sign. With service as their watchword, members of the Sub-Junior Club advised by Mrs. Winklosky, performed many worthwhile projects during 1967-68. These projects that brought pride to the school and community as well as to the club itself were as follows: decorating the children's ward at the local hospital throughout the year; acting as hostesses at the High Point Junior Women's Art Exhibit; collecting money for retarded children; serving as ushers at the High Point Museum; collecting toys for the golden door; and helping a needy family during the holidays.

To learn more about the Sub-Juniors and their part in the school and community, three delegates attended the Sub-Junior convention in Whispering Pines, N. C.

Proudly wearing their white sweaters with the High Point Central High monogram, the members of the Monogram Club endeavored to promote school spirit at all athletic events. Meeting every two weeks, the club planned methods to lift school spirit, which proved helpful in spurring the various teams on to victory. One method employed was the selling of Bison Booster Tags. The club also helped to raise funds for various school projects.

Advised by Coach Sam Byers and Coach Robert Beasley, the club was composed of athletes who had earned a letter in at least one varsity sport. The club was indeed an active force in stimulating CHS students to support their Bison teams and their school.

Anchor Club serves school with enthusiasm

Sponsored by the Pilot Club of High Point, the Anchor Club continued to work toward its goal of service with friendliness and concern for the school and community. With special thoughts of the teachers, the girls sent a greeting card to each teacher on holiday occasions during the year. They also gave a tea at the first of the year for all new teachers. As a financial project, they made and sold sandwiches to the visiting teachers of the North Central area who attended the NCEA District Meeting held at High Point Central in October. Adviser for the club was Mrs. Carol Rich.

"Service to school and community" was the motto of the Junior Jaycees, newest service club at Central High. Affiliated with the High Point Jaycees, the junior organization got off to a fine start by assisting the sponsoring group with paper drives and other community projects. President Ed Woods, Vice-president Larry Ingram, and Secretary Andy Beck all played important roles in chartering the new club. They met every two weeks to chart their course and to plan worthwhile projects. Chief among their plans was the building and maintaining of a co-operative spirit in all school activities. Two of Central's new teachers, Mr. Rudy Diamond and Mr. Ben Howell, were advisers of the new service club.

To many people, working with numbers is a drudgers, but not to the ambitious members of the Math Club, who found mathematics an interesting field of study.

With the purpose of furthering the cause of higher mathematics on the high school level, the members met every other Thursday to discuss their interest and to hear speakers on subjects related to mathematics.

Undertaking several projects this year, the club helped the mathematics department with its everyday and extra duties. For their main projects the Math Club bought a set of reference books for the department and sponsored the Mu Alpha Theta test—a test on higher mathematics for interested and talented students who wished to prove their powers in this field.

As one of their major projects, Math Club members donote voluoble books to the librory.

Keen interest in the science of today's world led many CHS students to join the Science Club. The regular meetings were enlivened by discussions of projects and by informative programs. Highlight of the year was a talk by Dr. Rhyne of Duke University, who spoke on the subject of Extra Sensory Perception.

For the benefit of interested and talented students, the club sponsored the Westinghouse Talent Search Examination. Another project of the club was the Science Fair. Through the Fair, Central's true scientisits were revealed as they received awards for their time-consuming projects. From the local level, winners progressed to district and state levels.

Through projects such as these, the Science Club provides a true link between the students and the world of science. They became increasingly aware of the importance of science in everyday life.

Health Careers Club surveys medical area

In its fifth year at Central High, the Health Careers Club opened doors of opportunity to students interested in medicine and related fields of work. During the year members had the privilege of hearing several prominent speakers. In November the group traveled to Parkland High School to attend the convention of the North Carolina Health Careers groups. There they listened to speeches by medical specialists and toured clinics, hospitals, and medical schools in the Winston-Salem area. They also viewed films on medicine, dentistry, pharmacy, and related fields.

Health Careers members were especially grateful to the North Carolina Medical Auxiliary for the use of valuable films and for financial assistance in their exhibit for Central's Homecoming Day.

French Club hears student from Holland

To further the knowledge of French language and culture was the goal of Le Cercle Francais during the year 1967-68. All meetings of the year were conducted in French, and the areas of interest proved quite appealing to the serious French student. At the beginning of the year an exchange student from Holland who had traveled in neighboring France proved to be an interesting visitor. At other meetings members saw French films and a Moliere play "Tartuffe," presented by a repertory company, Le Treteau de Paris. Later, a field trip to UNC-G netted several lectures on French literature by a noted Frenchman.

Other activities included a fashion show and a French-style banquet, pen-pal correspondence with students in France, and a stationery sale to raise money to send a student either to France or Spain.

Buenos dios! This was the friendly greeting of Spanish Club members as they re-organized for the year. Features of their programs were speakers from Spanish-speaking countries and activities which helped students understand and become aware of the culture of these countries.

The Spanish Club worked with the French Club to send a student either to France or Spain. This year the sale of stationery helped to make the trip possible. Members improved their linguistic abilities through both writing and conversation. During National Language Week the group took an active part in the various programs. Dressed in authentic costumes, several members participated in skits and other dramatic presentations.

Mrs. Sandra Blythe and Mr. Luis Sanchez-Gomez, advisers, gave valuable assistance to the club in all its endeavors.

Several members of Central High's Junior Classical League represented the school at the State JCL Convention in Chapel Hill last spring and returned to the CHS organization with many new ideas. A Roman Saturnalia party at Christmas and a variety of dramatic skits furnished material for several entertaining and informative programs.

During Latin Week, the Roman banquet program included a slave auction and a Roman dinner. Profits from a fund-raising campaign were used to finance JCL activities of the year.

Several delegates from Central High, accompanied by their adviser, Mrs. Carolyn Phillips, attended the State Junior Clasical League Convention at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill in March.

To carry out their program of improvement in community living, the FHA adopted several projects. They made attractive favors to be distributed to children in the hospital and sunshine baskets to cheer the shut-in patients. At school they prepared a Homecoming exhibit which won third place in the competition.

FHA was hostess to chapter officers and advisers of Guilford County in October. Delegates attended the District Rally in Greensboro and also the state FHA convention in Raleigh.

Boasting total membership in the State Library Association, the seventeen members of Central's Library Club met on the second Tuesday of each month to share their common interest in library work and to plan how they might best render their much-needed services to the school. As everyday projects, the club worked faithfully during study periods and before and after school, helping both teachers and students to enjoy full use of library facilities. They also assisted with routine work and helped to make the library neat and attractive by setting up displays and making bulletin boards.

In October the local club was host to the North Central District Meeting of the North Carolina High School Library Association. Trying to attract the attention of library-goers, two members of the Library Club orrange an eye-cotching bulletin board.

Future Business Leaders explore job world

With programs, visiting speakers, and wide reading, Future Business Leaders of America became well informed about the business world they plan to enter after graduation. They learned about the activities and trends in business, about the preparation and filing of income tax forms, and about the correct ways of making applications for jobs.

During the year FBLA members assisted teachers by typing, duplicating, and preparing study materials. In this way they gained valuable experience and rendered a real service to the school.

In regular business and social meetings they planned projects and then worked enthusiastically to carry them out. They donated to worthy causes in both school and community. To finance their projects, FBLA members conducted a bake sale.

FTA aids school, explores teaching field

To explore future ambitions, the Future Teachers of America met each month to gain general knowledge about the teaching field. By listening to speakers and by taking part in discussion groups they learned of the opportunities available and the responsibilities involved in the teaching profession.

As a service to Pemican subscribers, FTA sold plastic yearbook covers for their moneymaking project. They also participated in activities concerning National Education Week by serving as guides at the PTSA Open House meeting on November 9. To show their appreciation of student teachers, FTA members presented each "practice" teacher with a small aift.

FCA encourages ideals of sportsmanship

FCA officers moke plons to invite prominent speakers for programs.

The Fellowship of Christian Athletes sought to promote good sportsmanship and fellowship among athletes. Boys who participated in a sport were eligible for membership, and cheerleaders were honorary members. For their membership drive FCA held a barbecue at the City Lake. At their meeting they conducted discussion groups on subjects important to every athlete. These subjects included the following: player to player relations; player to coach relations; attitudes and relations towards one's family. Prominent men in athletic work were guest speakers on two occasions.

In the spring several professional athletes, members of FCA, were on the program of the FCA Conference, which met in High Point. Delegates from nearby towns and communities attended this conference.

Group earns praise from students, fans

"The spirit of Central" might well be another name for the High Point Central High Schaol Pep Club. Animated members of the club provided a link between Central's students and sparts through such projects as making baoster tags, selling shakers, and spansaring Blue and White Day. Anyane who participated in the Pep Club's caravans to certain games will remember the fun and excitement involved in decorating his car and praceeding to the games in a line of hanking automobiles and spirited students.

Many peaple said that Central's spírit was at its best this year. The Pep Club certainly supparted that statement as they lived up to their matta, "We're behind ya, Bisan, all the way!"

To receive the blue and white cap was the goal of each girl who worked to become a Youth Volunteer. The girl who earned her cap was proud to wear it.

To become a Volunteer, each girl had to attend six hours of lectures at night on the principles of the Red Cross. Then she received four hours of training in hospital procedures by nurses at the local hospital. After training, each girl was placed on probation for ten hours; if she passed, the cap was awarded to her.

Events . . . College Day looks to future

Prospective students, realizing the importance of choosing the right college, question the N. C. State representative on College Day.

"What kind of tests besides College Boards do I need to go to college? What kind of grades do I need?" These were some of the many questions asked by CHS students of 64 colleges and universities on College Day. The occasion gave students an opportunity to make important decisions and plan ahead for further education.

Students looking forward to a continuation of studies after graduation from high school conversed with representatives concerning all types of scholarships, applications, and estimates of the necessary expenses at the colleges they hoped to attend.

Members of the Beta Club and the National Honor Society acted as hosts and served refreshments during the social hour.

Rarely is the girls' gym so busy as on College Day, when students meet with representatives to discuss important plans.

Career Day offers vocations, professions

Career Day 1967, sponsored by the High Point Rotary Club, brought vocational guidance, inspiration, and encouragement to the students of Central High. Through the cooperation of business and professional people of High Point and the CHS faculty, students gained accurate information concerning the vocations of their choice. They were able to select from more than 60 vocations and to attend general class sessions of two of their choices.

Representatives of the various vocations enlightened students by providing information about schooling, expenses, earnings, and advantages and disadvantages of their particular types of work.

Career Day provided a real opportunity for students to make wise decisions and plans for the future.

'Fox Hole '67' reveals talent of Central

Displaying her creative ability, Debbie Cecil dances to the tune of "Alfie."

Silence overcame the crowd as the lights dimmed and the curtain opened, revealing the stage setting of "Fox Hole '67." Then the combo began playing, and the audience came alive!

Led by masters of ceremonies Judi Carter and John Ripley, talented students of Central High went all out to present one of the best talent shows of recent years. "Fox Hole '67" was a hit, featuring three lively combos, four original dance routines, three instrumental numbers, and six vocal performances. Two highlights of the show were a comedy monologue and the girls' and boys' octets singing "Unchained Melody." Much hard work went into the production, which was a delightful show for everyone. The audience was enthralled, and "Fox Hole '67," sponsored by the Student Council, went down in history as a success.

'Carousel' provides gaiety, enchantment

Anticipating a wonderful evening, Lynlee Lambeth and Tim Ilderton arrive at the Junior-Senior prom.

It was April 21, 1967, and the night was transformed by the colorful decorations of a carousel scene. The occasion was the annual Junior-Senior prom. The combined efforts of enthusiastic juniors and seniors produced a gala merry-go-round setting as the featured decoration. With music furnished by the Plaids, each couple was able to join in the gayety of the evening.

For intermission entertainment Josef Walker played a musical selection from the stage and screen hit "Carousel," as the Junior and Senior Class officers and their dates danced. Mark Gross was the master of ceremonies throughout the evening and extended a special welcome to faculty, school board members, and parents of officers, who were honored guests.

One step oheod of a North Forsyth Viking, quarterbock Steve Sorrell breaks into the open for a valuable gain.

Disploying defensive strotegy, the Bison move in to reduce the opponent's yardage.

The Bison passing attack proved to be disastrous in the opening game of the season against R. J. Reynolds. High Point went to the air 23 times and Reynolds pulled down four of them and turned two of them into touchdowns. The Bison defense, however, was impressive. They held the opponents to only five first downs and 118 yards rushing. The final outcome was in Reynolds' favor, 20-0.

In their first away game, High Point dominated play early, keeping the ball from the East Forsyth Eagles for all 22 plays in the first period. Then, scoring on the first play of the second quarter as Terry Kelly went over from the three-yard line, the Bison took the lead. With 6:30 left in the game, the Eagles came back to score two touchdowns and win the game, 13-7.

Returning home, the Black Bison clashed with North Forsyth who scored four times on long punt returns and pass interceptions. High Point finally scored two touchdowns in the fourth quarter on runs by Terry Kelly and Roger Blanchard. The final tally was North Forsyth 28, High Point, 13.

Warding off offensive players, Bison Toby Lindsay rushes in and prepares to tackle a Grimsley Whirlie.

The Bison invaded Greensboro Dudley for an action packed Central 4-A Conference game. Trailing 19-0 in the second quarter, the Bison kicked up their heels, and by the fourth quarter the score was 25-21, but still in Dudley's favor. Then with three minutes to play, misfortune struck when the Panthers added another TD to win the game 32-21.

Meeting next with the Page Pirates, the Bison lost 7-0. The Pirates took advantage of a pass interception in the second period to score. The Bison came roaring back to score a touchdown, only to have it nullified.

Greensboro Smith turned a Bison fumble into a touchdown in the opening minutes of the sixth game of the season. Smith went on to defeat High Point 12-6.

Three touchdowns gave a victory to Lexington and a defeat to Central in the seventh game. The Bison scored their only touchdown in the first half, and even though dominating play in the second half, they could not reach the end zone. The game ended with Lexington 19, High Point 7.

In the Grimsley game, Roger Blanchard moves in to block the advancement of a Whirlie.

Perfection was the word as the Central High Black Bison overcame Greensboro Grimsley 19-12 in the big game of the season. The Bison offense moved the ball with precision and skill, and the defense kept the rush on from start to finish. There was no single star of the game, but rather a combination which equaled an unbeatable team.

Fumbles by the Bison and long passes by the Mustangs gave Parkland a 33-13 victory over High Point Central. The Black Bison scored one of their two touchdowns after a 90-yard drive with 7:16 left in the half. The other TD was scored after a pass interception by Terry Kelly.

Down by two touchdowns in the second period, High Point roared back at Burlington to make the score 14-14 at the half. Through pass interceptions in the second half by David Cecil and Brent Shaver, the Bison were victorious 35-28.

After a season of determination, the Bison finished with a 2-8 won-lost record.

Even though the team missed, Bill McKenzie stroked the ball 72 times to qualify for the individual part of the State competition. Inexperience was the key reason for the dismal showing as Jimmy Keever and Bill McKenzie were the only seniors to play. Jimmy Keever was medalist for the year.

Veterans prove asset to Bison baseball

At the start of the season the Bison were faced with a lack of experience. The infield, composed of Terry Kelly at first, Mike Ingram at second, Bobby Hill at short, and Rick Brewer at third was entirely new. The team was strengthened, however, by the return of four veteran outfielders and two important moundsmen, Eddie French and Roddy Starrett, who had seen action the previous year.

At the end of the season the batmen had achieved two wins and suffered 6 losses in Central 4-A conference play.

GAA participates in sports, builds spirit

GAA members practice diligently to gain skill in their favorite winter sport.

To promote sportsmanship and leadership and to develop character, the Girls' Athletic Association took part in many different sports throughout the year. This participation provided for the airls a year of variety and fun. Meeting twice a week with advisers Miss Pat Hester and Miss Cassandra Cozart, the girls planned an active and stimulating program suitable for all. During the year GAA sent delegates to the various sports events in the state. Among these were the Volleyball Playday held at Page High School in Greensboro, and the North Carolina State GAA Playday held this year at UNC-G. During the third week in April, GAA also sponsored the annual N. C. 4A Sportsday in High Point.

Co-captains lead team to winning record

Varsity basketball players apply all their techniques as they play for an important game.

Compiling a won-lost record of 10-5, the girls' Varsity basketball team displayed excellent playing skill. Led by co-captains Emily Millis and Liz Thomas, the team surged into the victory column against Page, Smith, East Forsyth, West Forsyth, North Forsyth, and arch rival Grimsley, Greensboro. The Varsity girls lost games to Ragsdale and Thomasville. Determination and effort proved the incentive for an excellent record.

After a slow beginning and two losses, the JV girls' basketball team came back to chalk up an 8-2 win-loss record. Outstanding play contributed to victories over archrivals Ferndale and Grimsley, Northeast, Thomasville, and Allen Jay. Though young and inexperienced, the JV Bisonettes applied energy, enthusiasm, and determination to achieve a successful season. Both Varsity and JV basketball girls achieved their 1968 aims by promoting competive games that stressed enjoyment of sports, leadership through student management, and building sportsmanship and character.

by leading students with boundless energy

Banners flew, horns sounded, and fans cheered as the High Point Central Varsity Cheerleaders led the spirit-filled caravan to the stadium for the first home game. Throughout football and basketball seasons, the cheerleaders kept the air filled with this enthusiasm and boosted the spirits of both teams and fans to their highest peak.

Also bubbling with enthusiasm were the JV Cheerleaders as they assisted the Varsity Cheerleaders at all home games. Together, the Varsity and JV girls sponsored Father's Night, led pep rallies and caravans, sold "Bison Booster" tags, collected money for the Bill Gentry Fund, and decorated the stadium for Homecoming. Cheerleaders played a vital part in building school spirit.

Even without the excitement af a real game, Jr. Varsity cheerleaders have na trauble mustering up spirit.

A Special Thank You

Miss Louise Tapp

To Miss Louise Tapp, Pemican adviser

We would like to recognize Miss Louise Tapp for her work on the Pemican throughout the years. Faculty and students who enjoy the Pemican, and even her student editors are probably unaware of just how many hours outside of school she has given toward the realization of her ideal yearbook. She has stood through two-day stretches of picture schedules in thirty-degree weather, staggered under boxes of layouts, and counted thousands of words of copy. We would like to say thank you to Miss Tapp for her unfailing interest and technical advice.

Thank You

- —To Mr. Shaver for approval of picture schedules and emergency requests. To our teachers for their co-operation when circumstances made it imperative that we miss class.
- —To Mr. Ward, Mr. Boswell, and Delmar Printing Company for their interest and help.
- —To Mr. Honeycutt for his patience and technical perfection in photography.
- —To Mr. Snow for his help with group pictures.
- —To Mrs. Davis for typing records, proofreading, and assisting with editorial work.
- —To Mr. Miller for help in photography.
- —To Judy and the business staff for their excellent sales records.
- —To our editorial staff for drawing, copywriting, and identifying countless pictures. To Greta, Teresa, and Vicki for hours of patient typing. To Hermine and Suzanne for extended picture-planning sessions. To Shelley and Marianne for writing copy, headlines, and captions. To Mike and Anne for tedious Senior Statistics. To Irving for the entire Sports division. And to Mark and Terry for pictures—the spur-of-the-moment ones and the occasional truly artistic shots.
- —To Miss Louise Tapp who put her all into making the Pemican technically accurate and in good taste, and whose experience saved us many a costly error.
- —Perhaps most of all we thank Fate for the incidentals—paper flowers, Rudy Valentine (an interpretive picture), or a joke that was strictly ours. For these things somewhat counteracted the drudgery of 1,800 cards to be written, 120 headlines to be composed, and hundreds of faces to be tagged. These things, the seemingly insignificant ones, will be remembered and will, with age, become significant, for they represent to us the people and the living that went into our Pemican.
